Generous Gifts Support Technology/Athletics

LASELL RECEIVES HISTORIC LEGACIES EXCEEDING $2.3 MILLION

TWO OF THE LARGEST GIFTS IN THE HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE HAVE BEEN received through the extraordinary bequests of two alumnae.

The first, approaching $1 million, was from the estate of Doris Bissett Bryant '21, closely followed by one which exceeded $1 million, from the estate of Dorothy Hagadorn Taylor '25. Both women were members of Lasell's Heritage Society, having named the College as a beneficiary of a percentage of their estates. "These two gifts mark an extraordinary step forward for an institution about to embark on a multimillion-dollar campaign," said Helena Hartnett, dean for External Affairs.

In addition to greatly strengthening the endowment, these gifts will allow the College to fund two major capital projects: the completion of phase two of the critical technological expansion and the equipping of the new athletic center. Such uses seem an appropriate way to memorialize these dedicated women. Mrs. Bryant was a trailblazer in her day as the first woman bank officer in Massachusetts, and Mrs. Taylor had a deep passion for athletics, attested to by the naming of the athletic field in her honor in 1992.

The Heritage Society was established in 1991 to honor Lasell friends and family who establish life-income gifts or include the College in their Wills. It currently includes nearly 80 members. ♡

Rising up behind Taylor Field with Gardner House in the background, Lasell's Athletic Center nears completion. The bequest from Dorothy Taylor will be used in part to support Lasell's athletic program.

Alumna's Generosity Gives New Life to Student Residence Hall

VAN WINKLE HALL DEDICATED

IT TOOK ALMOST 30 YEARS FOR "New Dorm," built in 1967, to gain a benefactor and a name. On October 5, 1996, a handsomely refurbished Van Winkle Hall was dedicated to celebrate the generous gifts of Adelaide Shaffer Van Winkle '36/Hon. B.S. '96.

Proud residents, with Adelaide Van Winkle, sport new Van Winkle Hall sweatshirts.

In honor of her 60th reunion, Mrs. Van Winkle funded renovations to the exterior of the residence hall which is situated in a stand of woods next to McClelland. The gift augmented a six-figure bequest intention and a charitable gift annuity she established to strengthen the endowment of her alma mater.

The dedication of Van Winkle Hall took place on Family and Friends Weekend, and was presided over by President Thomas E. J. de Witt. He spoke of Mrs. Van Winkle's personal accomplishments as a pioneering businesswoman and her longtime association with Lasell, where she currently serves as a member of the Board of Overseers.

Among family members participating in the dedication was her granddaughter, Heidi Watkins, who received her bachelor's degree

JILL KER CONWAY TO BE COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

JILL KER CONWAY, PH.D., BEST KNOWN FOR HER service as the first woman president of Smith College — a position she held for 10 years — will speak at Lasell College's 142nd annual commencement on May 18, 1997.

A visiting professor at M.I.T. in its Science, Technology and Society program since 1985, Dr. Conway has been critically acclaimed for her scholarship on women's history. She is also a best-selling author and an established social and intellectual historian.

Dr. Jill Ker Conway

Educated at the all-female Abbotsleigh School and the University of Sydney, where she took an honors degree in history, Dr. Conway emigrated to the United States in 1960 and completed her Ph.D. at Harvard University in 1969. As a historian, she has specialized in the history of American women. From 1964 to 1975, she taught at the University of Toronto, where she eventually became vice president. She later served as president of Smith College. In addition to her acclaimed autobiographical books, Road to Coorain and True North, Jill Ker Conway has written or edited several other books, including Merchants and Merinos (1960); The Female Experience in 18th- and 19th-Century America (1982); Women Reformers and American Culture (1987); Written by Herself: Autobiographies of American Women: An Anthology (1992, editor); The Politics of Women's Education (1993, edited with Susan C. Bourque). ♡

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Harnessing Information Technology to Lasell 2001

By Thomas E. J. de Witt, Ph.D.

THE CENTRAL THEME OF MY RECENT MESSAGES TO YOU HAS BEEN THAT OF institutional revival — whether in the Leaves, which outlined our ambitious plans for 2001, or in the Annual Report, which focused on the physical beautification of the campus. The challenge we now face is to develop strategies to sustain the academic innovation and curricular reform begun in the mid-eighties in order to reach our goal: to become New England's recognized leader in providing a professionally-oriented education rooted in the liberal arts.

One means to that end is to emphasize the currency and quality of a Lasell education by harnessing the potential benefits of the explosion in information technology.

Lasell, like most smaller liberal and professional arts colleges, is wrestling with the implications of a rapidly changing technology. We know that high-wage jobs require the use of networked computers and that by the year 2000 a majority of all new jobs will require the computer skills possessed by only 22% of Americans entering the labor market today. Though we have neither the resources nor the research agendas of major universities, we do recognize the need to continually redefine how we prepare students for the next century.

The curriculum has already expanded the focus of learning from one based on pure knowledge of subject matter to one that incorporates its practical application by developing new classroom techniques and assessment strategies.

Recognizing that we need to graduate technologically literate students, Lasell is investing heavily in bringing computers and their applications to faculty and students — into both the classroom and the residences. In the past two years, we have spent well over $1 million to lay the groundwork, figuratively and literally, for another decade of educational innovation: connecting 10 core classroom, office, and residence buildings using fiber optic cable for voice and data transmission; installing a digital telephone system as a platform for enhanced internal communication; and upgrading computer labs for general instruction and fashion/design.

To steal a march on our competition and to reap the full benefits of this exploding information technology, we identified additional investment in modern computing facilities as a priority in our upcoming capital campaign. Early gifts and bequests, including that of Doris Bissett Bryant '21, will enable us to complete phase two of a three-phase modernization plan this coming spring and summer at a cost of about $500,000: wiring five more residences (Van Winkle, McClelland, Gardner, Carpenter, and Vista); creating mini-computer labs in each of the residences in order to cope with the increasing student demand on our existing teaching labs; building a state-of-the-art computer business laboratory in the Heath Family Management Center in Wolfe Hall; and equipping faculty with the more powerful Pentium computers.

While few students currently enter Lasell with a laptop in hand, we expect that they will all either have or demand access to that technology by 2001. We have to be ready to accommodate them — and to offer a curriculum that effectively harnesses the learning potential computers offer.

For all our progress, the challenges remain daunting as well as exciting. We must find the resources to complete phase three, which will connect the remaining residences, the Yamawaki Art and Cultural Center, and future Lasell Village residences to our network. We must also plan for a regular cycle of technology upgrades. But most important, we must find opportunities for the faculty to acquire advanced computer literacy skills, which are critical to enhancing Lasell's reputation for innovation.

Over the next five years, you should anticipate significant changes in how we teach and learn together. Let me share with you a part of my vision for Lasell in 2001:

- Students will be able to interact with professors via e-mail from their residence halls or homes, sending drafts of written assignments and receiving suggestions for revisions;

- Faculty will easily amend course syllabi and transmit assignments with the touch of a keyboard;
- Students, faculty, alumnae, prospective students — all will communicate through Lasell's World Wide Web site on the Internet;
- Alumnae will plan class events via the Internet (as this year's 25th anniversary class intends to do);
- Students will assemble part of their work as an electronic portfolio on CD-ROM;
- Resident students will work collaboratively on projects with commuters via computer hookups.

I hope that you will participate in this new age of discovery with all of us here at Lasell. E-mail me at tdewitt@lasell.edu if you would like to share ideas.

LASELL'S NEW CHAIR OF THE BOARD BRINGS ACTIVISM AND ENTREPRENEURSHIP TO JOB

PATRICIA A. ZINKOWSKI FOUND THE COLLEGE OF HER CHOICE MORE than a decade after she graduated. This highly successful businesswoman and cofounder of FLIGHT TIME International, an aircraft charter service company, has experienced a Lasell College education close up, and she recognizes its value. "I would have thrived here. The small classes, the dedicated faculty, the investment in women, and the commitment to entrepreneurship," says the University of Massachusetts graduate, "all add up to making Lasell the energetic, efficient institution that it is."

"When I became board chair," she explains, "I wanted to experience Lasell from the inside. Over several days I went to classes, visited the archives, helped decorate the College Christmas tree, ate in the dorms, and talked to faculty and students. It was obvious they took great pride in their institution."

That kind of focus and attention to detail are the very essence of Patty Zinkowski's entrepreneurial style. For the past 11 years, Zinkowski has been instrumental in growing FLIGHT TIME International from its start-up to a company with more than $19 million in annual sales. An award recipient from organizations like Recently elected board chairman, Patty Zinkowski has already established herself as an active and engaged member of the Lasell community.

Computer Networking and the Internet Promote Changes in Study and Workstyles

CLAIRE KAY, DIRECTOR OF INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY, IS ON A mission to integrate technology into the total Lasell experience. "Computers are altering the way faculty teach and students learn — not only on this campus, but around the world," she says. "Faculty and staff are now electronically linked to each other, via electronic mail, and to the world outside, via the Internet."

Students too can participate in Lasell's technology revolution by logging on from computers in Woodland and a growing number of campus sites, including the Computer Center, the Brennan Library (see related story below), and a brand new business laboratory to be opened during the spring semester.

"From a technological point of view, Lasell today is very different from what it was even a year ago, but we still have miles to go," Kay continues. "The technology explosion has required rapid shifts in equipment and software and the need to provide staff to support it and do training. Catching up to the existing technology is one thing. The real challenge is keeping up."

Throughout the College, a massive, computer upgrade from DOS-based machines to Windows and a move toward user-friendly Microsoft products have bolstered the community's enthusiasm to utilize the College's technology capabilities. Today, computers are used in virtually every academic discipline. Psychology students are using interactive CD-ROM tutorials while accounting students are using electronic spreadsheets and fashion design students are using Computer Aided Design (CAD) software to facilitate and reinforce their creative output. And the technology revolution at Lasell has only just begun, says Kay.

"Computer networking at Lasell has opened a vast, new horizon in communication. Internet connectivity and e-mail are causing a resurgence in reading and writing among those who have access. It can create a world community that is open to diversity," says Kay. "Where do you want to go today" — the tag line of a major software company — has never been more apt. Even the once ponderous work of research has become an adventure through the use of computers. Students seeking information on the theories and practice of virtually any subject can mount lightning-fast searches through online or CD-ROM databases. The prodigious list of the resources found can be explored in depth at the convenience of the researcher.

"Technology is fostering the creation of whole new communities for activities like education and business," says Linda Bruenjes, a full-time member of the Computer Center faculty. "Students on campus can 'talk' to students across the world by way of the Internet. They can collaborate electronically on projects, and participate in distance learning where they can learn at an individual pace.

"Faculty are finding computers a welcome tool for expediting administrative tasks, like record keeping and class registration," she continues. "By enhancing productivity, computers enable faculty to focus more of their time on teaching, facilitating learning, and challenging students to learn and explore their subjects."

"Faculty can use computers as the route to exciting, interactive, multimedia ways of facilitating learning that are both engaging and challenging," Kay explains. "An art class at Lasell can now take a virtual field trip to the Louvre Museum in Paris and experience the wonders of Old Masters like Rembrandt, Rubens, Titian, and Leonardo da Vinci." Kay smiles. "In this way, the museum is open any time of day, 365-days-a-year, so students can visit at their convenience without even packing a toothbrush.

"...In the workplace and in personal life today, there is no place where computers do not play an important role,"

—Dr. Cathy Livingston, dean for Academic Affairs

Instead of standing at the front of the classroom lecturing, faculty can use computers as the route to exciting, interactive, multimedia ways of learning that are both engaging and challenging.

KINDRA CLINEFF

"Technology is an exciting new frontier, and Lasell has had the foresight to prepare for it and take advantage of it."

All students at Lasell are required to take computer literacy courses that introduce them to the basics of database creation and management, word processing, and information gathering via the Internet.

"Training our students, faculty, and staff in emerging technologies and making technology available to them is not a luxury, it is a necessity. In the workplace and in personal life today, there is no place where computers do not play an important role," says Cathy Livingston, dean for Academic Affairs. In fact, according to a recent article in the Washington Informer ("The Information Highway to Success," by Reed H. Hunt, 8/14/96), "already, most high-wage jobs require the use of networked computers." And, "on average, jobs that require computer use pay 15 percent more than those that do not." ■

WIRED AT LASELL: LIBRARY AUTOMATION CONNECTS STUDENTS TO A WORLD OF KNOWLEDGE

By Allyson Gray, director of Brennan Library

COMPUTER-ACCESSIBLE COMPONENTS, INCLUDING THE DATABASES OF local, regional, and national public and academic libraries, are available to students doing diligent research at Brennan Library.

As part of the extensive Minuteman Library Network (MLN), a system of 33 public and academic libraries that next year will include the public libraries in Cambridge, Newton, Brookline, and Lexington, Lasell currently provides students access to more than 3 million items, as well as to online databases and the Internet.

Students can search and find materials from other libraries on the network, request them, and have them delivered to Brennan through a state-supported service. This access significantly bolsters the resources available at Brennan. (Lasell's total annual circulation is 10,000, of which 10 percent are loans from the other MLN libraries.) Books, articles, and other materials can also be reserved online.

Databases provide similar access and support for learning. Students seeking specific information can sift through a selection of periodical databases, including one with the full text of articles for most of the citations listed. Once the information is found, students can print out the entire article, as though they were photocopying it from the magazine. Brennan's computer system offers two other databases under the Periodical Indexes, one for general periodicals, and the other for health related articles.

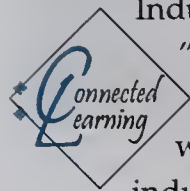

The Internet can be used from the MLN computers in a text-based, rather than graphic format. Lasell also provides access to the World Wide Web through its campus network. Providing students with a window to the world has always been a goal of education. Today, with the wonders of computers and technology, ready access to the community and the world is just a keystroke away. ■

Getting Known by the Company It Keeps

LASELL INSTITUTE OF FASHION TECHNOLOGY (LIFT)
BUILDS DYNAMIC PROGRAM ON STRONG INDUSTRY CONNECTIONS

"MARKET ABILITY. THAT'S WHAT STUDENTS LEARN AND EARN when they enroll in the Lasell Institute of Fashion Technology (LIFT)," says the program's evangelistic director, Richard Bath. After nine years at the helm of the fashion program, Bath has not lost enthusiasm for Lasell and the program.

Industry leaders have come to reflect his positive attitude.

"I enthusiastically endorse the Lasell Fashion program," says William Roddy, general manager of Neiman Marcus in Boston. "Students are well prepared for the realities and challenges of a career in the industry," he maintains. The program celebrates its 60th anniversary this year (see calendar, page 12).

"I'm proud that we prepare students for the business of fashion," says Professor Bath. The theory and creativity explored in the classroom are balanced by the reality of the marketplace, where Lasell is recognized as the New England leader in fashion merchandising and design.

"Creating extravagant cellophane ensembles for the runway is intriguing, but people today buy ready-to-wear," he explains. "LIFT's focus is on designing, manufacturing, and marketing products that sell and pay the bills." Students who come to Lasell learn fashion design. But they also have to satisfy course requirements in business and liberal arts. All students are required to take courses in ethics, business management, and computers.

"Judging by our placement success with interns — who fill positions nationally and internationally with more than 90 corporate partners, including Neiman Marcus, TJX, Macy's, The Gap, Filene's Basement, and Lord & Taylor, in cities that include Chicago, San Francisco, Miami, Atlanta, D.C., and New York — our approach to fashion education is giving the older, more established institutions a serious run for their money," Bath maintains.

The competitive edge comes from Lasell's rich integration of "connected learning" opportunities, through campus resources, including the Fashion Design Lab, where students work with sophisticated CAD/CAM pattern designers, cutters, and computer textile design systems.

A two-year-old designer-in-residence program has brought leading Boston designers such as David Josef, Jay Calderin, Tunji Dada, and Nong into classrooms to provide a close look at the fashion industry from all perspectives.

Lasell students plan and design window displays, get involved with the Fashion Association of Boston (FAB), a trade association for which Richard Bath serves as board chair, as well as a host of collaborative, community-service-oriented enterprises.

This year, the fashion students made news all over Boston: working with Maturity Matters, the new clothing company designed for seniors and the handicapped; co-sponsoring Boston's Fashion Week — a multi-site, multi-designer showcase of regional fashion — with Banana Republic and Maverick Media Group; and participating in some 25 fashion shows, including the elegant "Nocturne," in the lobby of the Boston Public Library.

KINDRA CLINEFF

Students assist the designer-in-residence, actually cutting and sewing pieces of a collection, and working on every aspect of production, including all the facets of the fashion shows intended to unveil the new works and attract media attention.

FACULTY:

Director of Nursing John Aflague, M.S., R.N., C.S., P.C., has earned inclusion in Who's Who in Medicine and Health Care 1997-1998 for his significant contribution to the field of health care.

Richard Bath, director of the Lasell Institute of Fashion Technology (LIFT), will be lecturing on "The Forgotten Retail Market," at the Valued Aging Conference and Expo, May 16 and 17, 1997, at the Bayside Exposition Center, Boston. The Expo is being sponsored by Eldercorps, a nonprofit membership organization in Cambridge that supports productive and valued aging.

Dorothy A. Bell, Ph.D., R.N., was cited along with the College in a current text called Careers for Chemists: A World Outside the Lab, by the American Chemical Society (Owens, Uhler, and Marasco, 1997). Dr. Bell earned a Ph.D. in chemistry from Brandeis University and a B.S.N. from Simmons College. She is currently pursuing a M.S.N. in Nursing Administration from Regis College.

Allyson Gray, director of Brennan Library, is chairing the MetroWest Interim Planning Committee of 20 librarians from all types of libraries interested in cooperative purchasing and better interlibrary loan service. New legislation has created a regional library system that includes public, academic, school, and special libraries throughout Massachusetts.

Dr. Paula Panchuck, director of the Early Childhood and Elementary Education program, was asked to submit an article for publication in the March 1997 issue of Early Childhood Today, "Living for the Moment: An Early Childhood Educator Works with Children with HIV/AIDS and Learns a Lesson About Life."

Assistant Professor of Mathematics Malini Pillai recently delivered "Innovative Teaching Methods," a presentation on classroom strategies that help women students confront their math anxieties and excel. The presentation was part of a workshop and conference, "Great Ideas for Teaching Students" (G.I.F.T.S.), an offering of the Faculty Development Programs of the Houghton Mifflin Company. "It is well documented that math anxiety constitutes a major barrier to women students' successful completion of course work and inhibits their ability to pursue careers that involve math," says Professor Pillai. "My goal is to teach math effectively to encourage women to continue their math education beyond the basic courses."

Associate Professor of English Mimi Reddcliffe, director of Liberal Arts, Open Studies and Interdisciplinary Studies, presented a paper, "Writing Across the Curriculum: Part of the Culture," at the Writing Across the Curriculum/National Conference in Charleston, South Carolina, in February.

Professor George Redmond, director of the Business programs at Lasell, was the focus of a segment on ABC's Nightly News with Peter Jennings about credit card abuse among college students. Redmond was interviewed by an ABC-TV crew following a Boston Globe front-page story that featured a student who benefited from Redmond's campus crusade to educate students on how to be credit-savvy and credit-card-prudent. Worried by a trend he noticed among students to "charge their way toward financial ruin," he began making an informal, living room presentation at the dorms on "discretionary debt" to help students "make dollars and sense" out of their finances and provide guidance around issues of personal finance.

MULTIPLE INTELLIGENCE THEORY LEVELS PLAYING FIELD FOR CHILDREN

HERS IS THE ZEAL OF AN EDUCATOR FOR WHOM STUDENT LEARNING SERVES as the true reward of a career standing at the front of the class. "It's very exciting to embrace new responses to special needs children and the way they learn," says Paula Panchuck, Ph.D., director of Lasell's Early Childhood and Elementary Education programs.

Dr. Panchuck is talking about the new emphasis in teaching that focuses on special needs learning and Lasell's exploration of the theory of Multiple Intelligence (MI). MI is a compelling new approach to early childhood curricula introduced by Harvard University's Howard Gardner.

Multiple Intelligence brings to the classroom new sensibilities about how individual children learn. Lasell recently received a grant from the Dewing Foundation to study the application of the MI theory in its two nationally accredited Child Study Centers, the Barn and Rockwell, laboratory schools where teachers-in-training work directly with infants, toddlers, and nursery school children.

The grant provides for Project Zero consultants from Harvard's Graduate School of Education to help Lasell teachers expand the present classroom offerings and explore new activities that focus on the multiple intelligences of young children.

"Some children will always have certain limitations on their learning. But the theory of MI celebrates different paths. It adopts a philosophy that says it is a healthy thing to highlight people's strengths and not to focus just on a class of skills we have traditionally valued. We're excited to be exploring the MI concept in our classes."

Entrepreneur and Photo Artist

MURTON SUDALTER ELECTED TO BOARD OF OVERSEERS

MURTON SUDALTER, FOUNDER AND CEO of Victor Bias Binding, a company that provides services to the apparel, footwear, drapery and interior design trades, was elected to the Lasell Board of Overseers in December 1996.

Mr. Sudalter is an entrepreneur who heads several other firms related to the apparel trade, including State Pleating Co., New England Scarf & Fringing Industries, and Arlene's Sportswear. He currently serves as an advisor to the Lasell Institute of Fashion Technology. He is president of the Apparel Industries of New England and is on the board of the Boston Designers Collaborative.

A photo artist, he has exhibited in galleries in New York and Boston and most recently at Lasell's Yamawaki Art and Cultural Center.

Overseer Murton Sudalter with his life-partner, new faculty member Sharyn Fireman, at the opening of his exhibition of photographs at Lasell, "Focus on the World: People and Places."

"Students' overall naiveté about personal finance poses the threat of financial ruin for a population already overburdened by sizable college loans," Redmond maintains. He is currently writing a comprehensive student guide to personal finance that he expects will be published next year.

A research article by Stephen Sarikas, Ph.D., associate professor in the Liberal Arts/Science program, has been accepted for publication in the Journal of Health Education. The paper, "AIDS Awareness at a Small Private College for Women," reports Dr. Sarikas' questionnaire findings during the first five of seven years of surveying Lasell students about their awareness of the virus, its impact, and its modes of transmission. The article was coauthored by Ann Heiselberg '93, who received her bachelor's degree from Lasell in Interdisciplinary Studies.

Professor Anne W. Tagge, of the English department, published an article, "The Butterfly Hunters," in the December 1996 issue of Conradiana, The Journal of the Joseph Conrad Society of North America. She also presented a paper at the University of Auckland, New Zealand Conference, "Narrative and Metaphor Across the Disciplines," in July 1996.

AN ESTATE PLANNING PRIMER, PART I

By Katharine A. Urner '83

MANY PEOPLE AVOID THINKING about estate planning for a variety of reasons — few of them based on good information or prudence. "I don't have enough assets," "Everything will go to my spouse," and "I'm too young to worry about a Will" are just a few of the excuses we make to ourselves.

The following contains some tidbits for your rumination. Of course, this information is presented in general terms and should not be acted on without professional advice from your attorney.

Q: I have a simple Will, which leaves my estate to my spouse. This is my intention, so why is it a problem?

A: It may not be a problem — if you have an uncomplicated life and a modest estate. However, if you have an estate that exceeds $600,000 in assets, your simple Will may not be the best arrangement for your family.

Q: What does the $600,000 cutoff indicate?

A: That's the amount you can pass on to your heirs with a simple Will without paying estate taxes. Assuming both spouses are U.S. citizens, you can pass any amount between the two of you without estate taxes because of the estate tax marital deduction. However, when the surviving spouse dies, your children may bear the burden of your mistake. They will have to pay estate taxes (at a rate of up to 55%), starting with the first dollar over $600,000.

Q: I'm pretty sure my estate is less than $600,000, so I have nothing to worry about, right?

A: It depends on your definition of "pretty sure." Many people grossly underestimate their net worth, because they don't know what to include in their assumptions. Add up the current market value of your real estate, marketable securities, annuities, retirement plans, life insurance (full death benefit, not cash surrender value), revocable trusts, business interests, cash, and tangible personal property such as art, antiques, etc. You may be surprised at how "wealthy" you are, at least according to the U.S. government.

Q: I guess my estate really does exceed $600,000. What's my best strategy?

A: Talk to an attorney, preferably one who specializes in estate planning. He or she will probably tell you how you and your spouse can pass up to $1.2 million to your heirs without estate taxes through the prudent use of both of your "Unified Transfer Tax Credits."

Q: What is a Unified Transfer Tax Credit?

A: The Unified Transfer Tax Credit is just a fancy way of saying that each of us has a $600,000 exemption from federal estate and gift taxes on assets we transfer to our children, certain types of trusts, or others. Too often, a married couple will forfeit one spouse's $600,000 exemption through the inappropriate use of a simple Will. Your attorney should be able to help you design a trust that locks in both spouses' credits, thereby allowing you and your spouse to bequeath up to $1.2 million to your heirs.

Q: Do you have any suggestions for a smart way to make charitable bequests to my favorite charities?

A: Absolutely — and it involves using the worst asset to have in your estate as a source of funds for charitable bequests. In tax language, any asset qualifying as Income in Respect of a Decedent (IRD) may be a bad asset to pass to your heirs because it is the most tax-burdened: not only might estate taxes be due on this type of asset, but income taxes are also owed. Types of assets that are considered IRD include tax-deferred retirement plans such as IRA accounts and pension plans. For this reason, IRD assets are often excellent assets to give to charity through a charitable bequest. Watch for more tax-smart ideas using IRD assets in the next issue of the Lasell Leaves.

ABSENCE MAKES HEART FONDER

FOR JANET WHITTEN SMITH '39, IT'S a classic case of absence making the heart grow fonder. "I thoroughly enjoyed every minute of Lasell," she says about her college years.

What makes this statement remarkable is that Mrs. Smith spent only one year at Lasell and hasn't returned to campus since 1938! Yet her experience continues to have a profound impact on her life. So much so, in fact, that she has chosen to establish a gift annuity at the College.

Janet Whitten Smith '39

Long and powerful memories seem to have spawned this generosity. "I remember the classes well, particularly home economics," Janet Smith explains. But, most of all, the friendships have lasted a lifetime. "I even met my husband, Ken, at a Lasell dance." And she is the mother of a Lasell alumna, Karen Smith Grover '62.

Over the intervening years, Janet Smith kept in touch with many college friends and looked forward to hearing about others in Leaves.

When the time came for both Ken and Janet Smith to make an important charitable gift, they immediately considered their alma maters. Ken Smith is a graduate of Boston University, Mrs. Smith explains. So his decision was obvious. "And even though I have many other volunteer commitments, Lasell was definitely the winner."

Mrs. Smith chose Lasell's Gift Annuity program, which entitles her to an annual fixed income for life of almost 8% of her gift. She wisely funded her Lasell Gift Annuity with highly appreciated stock that she had owned for many years. Both Janet and Ken Smith knew that if they sold the stock themselves, they would owe huge capital gains taxes. However, as a charitable organization, the College was able to sell Mrs. Smith's stock for her, greatly reducing the capital gains tax consequences and putting the full market value of the stock to work for both Janet Smith and Lasell.

With a Lasell Gift Annuity, she was able to increase her income, avoid capital gains taxes, and even qualify for a major charitable deduction on her taxes. Best of all, this very generous gift will strengthen her alma mater. "I just felt it was a darn good idea," Mrs. Smith maintains. "Good for us and good for Lasell."

Class Notes

Carolyn Vicary Krider's home is in Sea Island, GA, and she spends summer and fall at a lifecare establishment in North Branford, CT. Carolyn has four great-grandchildren.

'26

Dorothy Aseltine Wadsworth celebrated her 90th birthday last May and was feted at a wonderful and fun surprise party at her nursing center in Winchester, MA. Dorothy's full and busy year was highlighted by her 70th Lasell Reunion, where she led the parade with President de Witt and received a standing ovation for being the oldest alumna in attendance. Dorothy is thrilled at becoming a great-grandmother in 1996 — a banner year indeed!

'27 70TH REUNION
MAY 30-JUNE 1, 1997

Clarine Booth Villars loves flowers and classical music and enjoys visits from her daughter, granddaughters and great-granddaughter. Clarine has very fond memories of trips in and around Boston during her Lasell days.

Ruth Hutton writes that her energies these days are centered around avoiding a repeat of the tumble she took last February. She sold her car last April and now feels a bit "stuck." Ruth no longer travels and sends her love to all who will be able to attend Reunion.

Madalyn Patten Hoberg is living with her daughter. She hopes to attend Reunion this spring and wonders if any other classmates will join her.

Congratulations to Katherine Tufts Wiese! She and 27 relatives gathered in her former hometown of Chetek, WI, to celebrate Katherine's 90th birthday. Katherine was a kindergarten teacher and her interest in children of that age includes writing poetry. She sent us three very charming examples, accompanied by wonderful line drawings and here is one which we thought you'd enjoy sharing with grandchildren and great-grandchildren:

THE OCTOPUS

The Octopus has 8 long legs
To help him on his way;
And on these legs are many cups
To hold him where he wants to stay.
His mouth is underneath him
So he eats right in his middle
And bites his food off with his teeth
To eat it little by little.
They used to think him very mean
Because he looked so awful.
But now they find him shy and gentle
And really very lawful.
Here is what he looks like
As a baby from the sea;
And aren't you glad we're not like that
But just like you and me?

Katherine hopes to attend Reunion, keeps in touch with Mary Fulton Garstang and sends her love to all classmates.

'28

Congratulations to Kathryn Forgey who celebrated her 90th birthday in August, 1996. Kathryn gets around with the aid of a cane.

Margaret Newman keeps house for herself and her two cats and is active in a number of organizations. She misses her good friend and classmate for 14 years, Phoebe Dotten Low, and was very sorry to read of the passing of classmate Evelyn Douglass Hooper.

'29

We were very sorry to learn from her son that Emily Crump Ramstetter, president of this class, suffered a severe stroke in May 1995 which left her unable to speak. Emily is now at Lakewood Manor Health Care Center, 1900 Lauderdale Drive, Richmond, VA 23233, and so enjoys receiving cards and letters.

Katharine Edwards Bennett is settled happily in her new home in the Sandhill Cove Retirement Home in Palm City, FL, and makes occasional visits to her sons in Miami and on Long Island.

Marjorie Parrish Green writes that she has a new winter address in Frostproof, FL (what a wonderful name!) "among the orange trees and migrant workers!"

'32 65TH REUNION
MAY 30-JUNE 1, 1997

Betty Parrish Newman enjoys many activities, including gardening, golf, bridge, walking the Florida beach in winter and working with Infant Welfare Society.

Katherine Hartman Macy continues her involvement with growing the flowers for her dried flower business.

Muriel Morse Henrich is an avid gardener and spends summers at her cottage in Pemaquid Point, ME.

Camilla Roy Jewett is in good health and her travels include visits with her family in San Francisco and Vermont and some time spent in the warmth of Florida. She drives her car on short trips and keeps active with the many organizations in her pretty little town of East Hampton, NY, where she has lived for 48 years.

Althea Ward Weatherhead keeps in touch with Elizabeth Page Sealey and notes that the next time she has children she hopes they settle closer to home! One son lives in Florida and has two children and Althea visited them last Thanksgiving. Her other son lives in Alaska.

Congratulations to Shirley Gould Chesebro who has become a great-grandmother.

Hazel Merritt Bliven lives in Manchester, NH, and occasionally visits with Elizabeth Hayford Stewart who lives in Concord.

Congratulations to Louise Newell Audette and her husband who celebrated their 62nd wedding anniversary on October 29, 1996. Louise plays old-time favorite tunes once each month at a nearby nursing home and sings in the church choir each week. She is also active in DAR, Bible study, church women's group and participates each month with 12 women in Thalian Club.

Charlotte Ockert sends warm greetings to classmates.

Mabelle Hickcox Camp
166 Middlebury Road, Watertown, CT 06795

Carol Morehouse Jones
108 Brynwood Drive, Easton, PA 18045

Celia Kinsley Percival has recently moved to a villa in a retirement community and plans, for now, also to keep her home in Dayton, OH.

'35

Fannie Jane Brackley Starbird had a wonderful time with classmates who returned for 60th Reunion and notes that all were saddened to learn of the death of Barbara Iris Johnson.

Harriet Colwell Reeves has nine grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the interest of protecting the privacy of our alumnae, it is the policy of the Alumnae Affairs Office not to divulge addresses or phone numbers of alumnae unless it has been verified that the request is from another alumna.

In order to ensure the accuracy of Class Notes and Nota Bene, we must request that all submissions be made in writing. All entries in Class Notes are based on materials submitted to Lasell College's Alumnae Office. Due to the large number of submissions, Lasell is unable to verify the factual content of each entry and is not responsible for erroneous material. The Class Notes printed in this issue were received by January 15, 1997. Information received after this date will appear in the next issue. Please send your news to your Class Secretary or to the Alumnae Office at 1844 Commonwealth Avenue, Newton, Massachusetts 02166-2716. We regret we cannot return photographs unless accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Thank you.

Denise Gile Arnold and her husband, Mort, are fine and enjoy the many letters received from Denise's friends in the class of '35.

Sally Swanson Dahlberg enjoyed seeing President de Witt and many friends at the Connecticut Valley Lasell luncheon. Sally was especially happy to be attending with her daughter, Susan Dahlberg Tobiasson '64.

Margaret Weber Hodges is living in an assisted living facility in Huntsville, AL, and although it is a fine place to live she misses New England very much.

Virginia White Wardwell has fond memories of her years at Lasell and fondly remembers her frequent telephone visits with the late Helen Beede '21. Virginia worked in Miss Beede's office while at Lasell, and later enjoyed bridge games during the 1980s with Helen and "Aunt Bertha."

Phyllis Gurn Rodgers
80 Top Hill Road, Saunderson, RI 02874

Natalie Hutchison Clouser was sorry to miss her 60th Reunion.

'37 60TH REUNION
MAY 30-JUNE 1, 1997

Louise Tardivel Higgins
3150 NE 48th Court, #314, Lighthouse Point, FL 33064

Dorothy Abbott Atherton would be delighted to see renewed interest in a New Hampshire Lasell Club.

Frances Austin Beaumier and her husband are happy with their recent move from their house to a one-level condo. They go to Florida for four months in the winter and to their Vermont camp for a month in the summer. Both are active with golf and volunteering and Frances does lots of handiwork and crafts for her church.

Barbara Burnham Rice moved to a very nice retirement village in 1995. She plays bridge, does needlework and enjoys her delightful apartment on a little lake in Sarasota.

Anne Campbell Terrill and her husband, Jim, have relocated to Lake of the Woods, near Fredericksburg, VA.

Prudence Crandall Randall is involved with social service work, tending the elderly and the needy as welfare secretary of The Salvation Army and with the Danvers Council on Aging.

Mary DeGroff Mailler enjoys bridge and golf and is an alcoholic counselor. She taught in the Navy Alcohol Safety Action program for six years.

Adele de l'Etoile Breitenstein has been active in her church and enjoys exercise, golf and cross-country skiing.

Jane Eldridge Meaney belongs to an interesting local organization which involves the famous Red Mill. She has five grandchildren, plays golf after two knee replacements and usually spends a few months in Florida during winters.

We send our sincere condolences to Helen Flint Moody on the loss of her husband, Frederick, who died on September 26, 1996.

Barbara Fowler Hoyt's many activities include teaching music and enrichment weekly in two Head Start programs. She is a writer and a member of Pen Women of America and on the boards of Junior League and adult day care. A world traveler, Barbara lives in the home in Cos Cob, CT, that she and her husband built 48 years ago!

Marjorie Gilbert Wiggin is looking forward to her 60th Reunion this spring and is hopeful that many classmates will be attending. "What President Thomas de Witt has done for our alma mater is fantastic!" notes Marjorie.

Constance Griffin Lehoux travels to California with her daughter and has had sailing and boating trips with another daughter and her family. She helps on her oldest daughter's farm and with her four grandchildren.

Barbara Potter Fyfe is involved in art projects, doing pictures and dried flowers under glass, and enjoys interior decoration. She is an active member of Women's Club.

Among her many activities, Alcine Rippere Gager is a lifetime trustee at her secondary school, St. Margaret's, in Waterbury, CT. She is a past deacon at her church and on the board of women's fellowship as well as president of the New Haven Wives of Rotarians.

Florence Stetson Pipes sells Shaklee products from her home and recently enjoyed a free trip to that company's convention in Hollywood, CA.

We're hoping that a Lasell Florida event will coincide with Virginia Webb Tompkins' visit there this winter to spend time with her daughter in Vero Beach.

Augusta Williamson Hopkins continues her lifelong involvement with volunteering. She and her husband, George, have enjoyed hiking, camping, travel and, for the past five years, their trailer.

Frances Woodruff Saunders regrets that she will be unable to attend this year's Reunion, and sends her best to all who can make it.

We were sorry to learn from Virginia Wright Church that she had both bypass surgery and a stroke. She is living in Charlottesville, VA, and has had to learn to write all over again. We wish you continued good progress in your recovery, Virginia.

'38

Arlene Wishart Sylvester

81 Woodland Road, Auburndale, MA 02166

Betsy Bassett Wells wrote Arlene at Christmastime that she and her husband are very happy with their decision to purchase a condominium. They attend symphony, ballet, opera and theater and take part in church activities and many events at Portland State University.

Penny DeLaney Ogrinz works on her computer daily and is "hopefully, getting smart." She and her husband are in their 18th year of traveling by motor home and drove to New Mexico for a visit with their children this past Christmas. They've put over 130,000 miles on their coach and were grateful for having made the trip to New Mexico and back safely.

Marjorie Furbush Gledhill sent us word that she and fellow day students Frances Monks Berig, Shirley Hanson Carter and Ruth Fulton Griffin meet each year and renew their friendship.

Elisabeth McCausland Jewell and her husband had an outstanding cruise and tour to Alaska last August and traveled as far as Prudhoe Bay on the Arctic Ocean!

Ruth Meighan Gillette has seven grandchildren and works in real estate.

Bernice Schanberg Peachy informed us in November 1996 how wonderful it was to have her husband home again after his eight-month stay in a nursing home.

Martha Sill Wolstenholme loves to hear from Lasell friends and enjoys reading the news from campus.

Arlene Wishart Sylvester heard from Alice Seidler at holiday time and all was well with her.

Dorothy Thomas Thomas enjoyed a vacation in the Pacific Northwest last summer, sailing around the Queen Charlotte Islands in a 68' sailboat. She and many others noted how delighted they were to see Lasell College in the top 50 of U.S. News and World Report's list of liberal arts colleges.

Dorothy Woodard Grindell and her husband surprised Arlene Wishart Sylvester with a visit last summer as they traveled back to Florida in their mobile home.

Our sincere condolences to Gloria Ellis Tompson whose husband, Tom, passed away on June 10, 1996.

Jane Gray Taylor is enjoying her retirement after working for 27 years as administrative assistant for Potpourri Collection. She and her husband, Bob, have fun traveling to visit their two children and four grandchildren.

Natalie Hall Campbell and her husband live in a condo in South Carolina, and go to their cottage in Falmouth which they and their children now own. Nat hopes the entire class will begin to think about the 50th Reunion in 1999 and suggests that all make an effort to get together for a fun time and lots of reminiscing!

Norma Pickett Wise took a trip last June to Germany, Austria, Italy and Switzerland. She spent a couple of weeks last fall

FROM THE ARCHIVES: KATE FIELD 1856 – A REMARKABLE CAREER

By Dr. Donald Winslow

KATE FIELD, A DISTINGUISHED JOURNALIST, LECTURER, SINGER, AND actress, attended Lasell Female Seminary from 1855 to 1856. A classmate of the artist Elizabeth Gardner, she was a 17-year-old native of St. Louis, where her father was a noted actor and journalist. At the time of the 1851 portrait by St. Louis artist William R. Simpson, she was a pupil at Mrs. Smith's Seminary. Kate's mother, Eliza Riddle, was also an actress and the sister-in-law of Milton Sanford, a wealthy Boston businessman who paid his niece's tuition at Auburndale's thriving new school for young women.

Now, on the 100th anniversary of her death in 1896, Kate Field: Selected Letters, edited by Dr. Carolyn J. Moss, was published by Southern Illinois Press. This important collection follows a century of neglect and will no doubt revive even more interest in the author, her life, and publications. The nine letters Kate Field sent from Lasell Seminary, reveal something about the daily life here. Kate describes her enthusiasm for Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's new poem, "Hiawatha," and about learning two more choruses from Verdi and Rossini. She also attended a William Makepeace Thackeray lecture in Boston. Not surprisingly, Miss Field was homesick and not particularly happy at school. She studied French and especially singing. In a letter to her father, she mentioned her aunt's and uncle's visit to parental colleague and fellow actress, Charlotte Cushman, currently performing in Boston. In the same letter, she tells of appearing in popular school tableaux and says, "I think, talk, and dream of nothing but tableaux."

On January 28, 1856, the Seminary received word of the death of Kate Field's father. In February, two more letters to her mother describe her singing lessons and her difficulty concentrating on studies like Rhetoric, Geometry, and Criticism. Miss Field refers to her propensity to scribble and read, clear indications of her future life.

A month after her father's death, Kate Field left Lasell, and her aunt and uncle took her to Europe. There, her remarkable career began, including friendships with Robert and Elizabeth Browning, the Trollopes, and Charles Dickens.

While Lasell: A

History (pages 28-33) offers more on her life, Dr. Moss' carefully edited letters present many career details from beginning to end. ■ visiting roommate Mary Stone Leary in California and they enjoyed a lunch with Shirley Greenhalgh Fadley.

Distinguished journalist, lecturer, singer, actress — and Lasell alumna — Kate Field.

Betty Vail Morrissey and her husband had a wonderful time when they visited Nancy Irwin Van Dorn in La Jolla, CA, last September.

Jane Wadhams Hazen and Martha Hurd Davenport were delighted to have lunch together last November and especially pleased that they recognized each other!

Jeanne Zedren Scott and her husband are living in Florida and continue to miss their daughter and three grandchildren whom they visit once each year.

Marni Nahigian Sarkisian

256 South Avenue, Weston, MA 02193

Congratulations to Marilyn Bartlett Erratt and her husband who celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary last September. They travel to visit their son's family in Texas twice each year and have three granddaughters.

Last March Eleanor Barton enjoyed a nice visit from Naomi Cox Santoro and her husband.

Nancy Bean Lord enjoyed a too brief but thoroughly enjoyable visit from Anne Mastin Egner and her husband, Bob. Nancy and Ann are already making plans for the 50th Reunion in 2000!

Suzanne Clark Richardson is attending Vermont Technical College where she is studying materials and technology. She is a trustee of the American Precision Museum in Windsor, VT, a museum of old machine tools. Suzanne had dinner with Phyllis Howard Conner and Marilyn Sargent Babineau and their husbands and when Suzanne's daughter was married in Breckenridge, CO, last fall, Joy Gustavson Smith attended.

Jean Davies Stanley and her husband, Pete, enjoyed a great two-week trip last October to Portugal and Spain. They spent Thanksgiving weekend in Vermont with her sister, Joyce Davies Harrison and her husband.

Joan Dorau Hohorst has retired and she and her husband have moved to a condo. Their eleven grandchildren keep Joan busy.

We heard from Mary Louise Dunham Weyand in September 1996 that she and her husband were looking forward to a two-week European vacation.

Phyllis Farr Blanton's year is divided between Florida and Maine. She has five grandchildren.

Sally Hughes Fasick, Naomi Cox Santoro and Carmen Welch Clark met for lunch last summer at the Hyannis Yacht Club on Cape Cod and had a wonderful mini-reunion.

Elizabeth Kerrivan Davidson attended a delightful gathering of the Washington area Lasell alums at the home of Vivien Ash Gallagher '64 last fall and encourages other alums to join in the fun of Lasell gatherings. Bettie and her husband, Frank, are busy in retirement.

While visiting Maine last summer, Anne Mastin Egner and her husband, Bob, enjoyed a very nice get-together with Nancy Bean Lord and her husband, Jack.

Marni Nahigian Sarkisian is involved with her community garden club and last summer enjoyed a trip which included visits to Palm Springs, Sedona and the Grand Canyon. She enjoys helping her son with registration and timing of road races.

Rosemary O'Brien deBelay and Ellen O'Brien Montemurro spent four wonderful days with Marion Ettinger Steinmetz at Wild Dunes, SC, enjoying another of their terrific annual reunions. All send regards to the class of '50.

Jean Ostrander Lowman and her husband enjoy their Florida lives of part-time work and travel, swimming and tennis. They recently enjoyed a cruise and like to visit with friends in Maine and Arizona and with their grandchildren who live in Maryland.

Barbara Schnelle Orton serves, for the third time in six years, as president of the Lewes, DE, Lioness organization and helps with her grandson.

Clara Silsby Lamperti has been running her consignment shop for 25 years. She sees Joan Koch Ryan, Lois Form Senft and Jeanne Hackett Desmond regularly, and saw Marion Ettinger Steinmetz in Charleston, SC, last May for the first time in many years.

Carolyn Snook Rauscher spent a nice day on Cape Cod with her sister, Barbara Snook Haggerty '48, and Margot Bergstrom Semonian. She was planning a trip to Florida this past December and hoped to get together with former roommate Ruth Mount Ivins. Carolyn does volunteer work at the hospital and is very busy with church committees.

Congratulations to Jacquelyn Temperley Jennings who participated in the New Hampshire Senior Games and won a gold medal in 100 meter backstroke as well as a silver and two bronze medals. These wins qualify her to enter the National Senior Olympics in Tucson, AZ, in May this year.

45TH REUNION

MAY 30-JUNE 1, 1997

Jean Aslaksen Podimsky

6 West 14th Street

P.O. Box 57, Barnegat Light, NJ 08006

After working 32 years with the fire department, Lois Armstrong Howland retired in 1996 as office manager. She moved back to her childhood home, a farm house next door to where she raised her family. Lois is now doing renovations to a circa 1689 colonial house.

Jean Aslaksen Podimsky works as the bookkeeper at a commercial marina, is vice-president of a taxpayers association, is a tutor and tutor trainer and enjoys spending time gardening, reading and with her grandchildren. Jean invites any visitors to Long Beach Island to look her up.

Janet Bolster Peterson is retired as a tennis pro and working for the El Cajon Police Department in community relations. She graduated from the Police Academy in 1995.

Shirley Boothby-LeBarge's hobbies include writing, research, antique collecting and specialty book collecting, including Maine authors, women's studies and first editions. She is restoring a circa 1750 National Register cape in the country and enjoys gardening and classical music.

Peggy Bostwick Farnsworth is retired and spends some time each winter in Venice, FL, where she joins a great group of friends from her hometown.

Chloe Comstock Singarella loves to golf and canoe and has worked in both Yellowstone and Mt. Ranier National Parks during recent summers.

Marjorie Dyer Hubbard revels in having started to find her "own place" while at Lasell, and now, as a single woman, she couldn't be happier.

As of last June Barbara Herzog Burns had 10 grandchildren and was expecting two more. She keeps very busy traveling, babysitting and stocking her spot in an antique shop.

Gloria O'Dwyer Miller and her husband enjoy traveling around the United States and do a good bit of babysitting for their 13 grandchildren.

Janet Parker Smith plans to retire this year. She enjoys cross-country skiing and trips to Bar Harbor and Cape Cod in the summer.

Joeyna Raynal Rearwin has worked at Appleseed's in Concord, MA, for 12 years and serves on the Concord Friends of the Aging Board and Milldames. She enjoys tennis and travel year-round.

We were so sorry to learn from her husband, Dan, of the death of Nancy Slattery Haskins, and grateful to him for the wonderful letter he wrote of his and Nancy's courtship while she attended Lasell and he Harvard. "I chased her and chased her and finally caught up. I remember 'Tea Dances' and some nice afternoon Lasell programs. The 'ladies' were dressed, and the 'men' wore jackets and ties. Nancy studied hard and then we would toot off to dinner. She had to be in by 11 p.m. on weekends. A good rule. Nancy enjoyed going to the Harvard football games. Here, again, the gals put on their tweed suits. After the game, it was off to the Club and fun with Lasell and Harvard friends. Barbara Stober Poole married my Harvard roommate, Warren. You see, we chased Lasell girls together." We have sent our condolences to Mr. Haskins and know many of you will enjoy his fond recollections.

Virginia Snedaker Marschall plans to retire as an account administrator in about a year. She plays tennis and travels as much as time permits. Congratulations to Virginia and her husband who celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary last November. They have two grandchildren.

Barbara Trout Krohn is busy with many activities, including family and tennis.

Muriel Webb Moyer is an active garden clubber. She gives talks in Florida on growing and using herbs and paints floorcloths.

Dorothy Webb Slack is working on her doctorate in education at Clark University.

Nancy Whelton Herold is very much enjoying her retirement. She has six grandchildren.

YOUNG ALUMNAE NEWS

Pictured above are members of the Young Alumnae Club who attended a casual gathering at the Cambridge Brewing Company in September. The next activity is a Boston Harbor cruise on the Spirit of Boston on Friday, June 27, 4:30 - 6:30 p.m. Other young alumni from Bridgewater State College, Dean College, Endicott College, and Newbury College will be joining us on our private third level deck for light hors d'oeuvres, a cash bar, and dancing. This is a great way to see old friends, meet other young alumni from area colleges (those who graduated in the '80s and '90s) and to network while cruising Boston Harbor. Admission, $19 per person. Guests are welcome. Invitations will be mailed in early May.

Trustee Emerita and Former Annual Fund Chair Gets Her Due

RUTH TURNER CROSBY '42
RECEIVES LASELL BOWL

RUTH TURNER CROSBY '42, AN alumna with an ambassadorial flair for promoting and supporting her alma mater, was honored by the College with the bestowal of the Lasell Bowl, the institution's highest award, on October 21, 1996.

"In 1973 the college established a special award — the Lasell Bowl — to be presented to an individual who has provided significant and outstanding service to Lasell over an extended period of years," said President Thomas E. J. de Witt, during the presentation before members of the Lasell community.

"To give you an idea of how rarely such an individual has come to the fore: the award was last given 10 years ago, to trustees emeriti Louise Tardivel Higgins and Donald Winslow. Tonight it is my special privilege to present this award to Ruth Turner Crosby." President de Witt noted with pride that Mrs. Crosby, who graduated from Lasell nearly 55 years ago, "has never really left. She got a second degree — an honorary bachelor's — in 1992." Ruth

Crosby has demonstrated her commitment to Lasell in a number of ways. She has been a devoted member of the Alumnae Association's Board of Management, and has served it in myriad capacities, including president. Elected to the Board of Trustees in 1979, Mrs. Crosby became chairman of the board in 1989 and served in that capacity until 1992. During her tenure, Lasell became a four-year institution. She was recently elected to serve as trustee emerita.

She has worked diligently for the last four years as Annual Fund Chair, overseeing a dramatic increase in giving that also yielded 100 percent participation on the part of trustees, corporators and the alumnae board. She has also made a life-income gift to the endowment.

A champion of commuting students (known as "day hops" in her college days), Ruth Crosby was recognized for her ongoing institutional activism and support with the naming of the commuter lounge as "Crosby's." The sterling silver Revere Bowl which she was awarded is not the first Lasell award Mrs. Crosby has earned from her beloved institution. In 1976, she was the recipient of a Lasell Medallion for her distinguished service to the college. ❧

Ruth Turner Crosby '42 accepts Lasell's highest honor, the Lasell Bowl, from President de Witt.

A Diagnosis of Breast Cancer Launches an Activist

NANCY REEVES PETERSON '66 IS WORKING TO PUT HERSELF OUT OF A JOB. This vivacious, 13-year breast cancer survivor, research fundraiser, and women's health advocate would like nothing better than to see her mission and that of the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation end.

But that is now. Before, in the aftershock of her own breast cancer diagnosis, Peterson's typical energy and optimism completely dissipated. "I was deeply depressed," the Akron, Ohio resident admitted during a phone interview recently. "I thought my world had ended." While husband Gary and their two children watched helplessly, Peterson succumbed to self-pity and despair.

Then, a few years later, on a solo trip to her vacation home in Aspen, Colorado, Nancy Peterson met philanthropist Nancy Brinker, who had founded the Komen Foundation in memory of her sister, a breast cancer victim. Peterson immediately became a volunteer for the organization, raising money for the Foundation's annual "Race for the Cure," a run for dollars. The process was so successful and personally fulfilling that she returned to Colorado the following year to work again on the race.

Within a short time, Nancy Peterson found herself not only coordinating the race but helping other Foundation chapters. Seventy-eight American cities, including Boston, currently sponsor similarly successful races. "The money we raise from these races is already changing the face of breast cancer research," says Peterson excitedly. "The Komen Foundation provides national funding for blood tests to screen women who are genetically at-risk. We also guarantee free mammograms for any woman, regardless of her ability to pay."

Peterson's fundraising acumen soon became legendary, with a 95% success rate in her personal solicitations. "Our business sponsors are incredible," states this resolute volunteer, who now serves as a Komen Foundation trustee and the organization's vice president for development. "The generosity of companies like J.C. Penney, Ford, American Airlines, Pier 1, Boston's New Balance, Lifetime Television, Quaker Rice Cakes, and many others gives corporate America a compassionate, human face."

The capstone of her fundraising efforts came last June, when Peterson was invited to Vice President Al Gore's home, following her testimony at Senate committee hearings and a celebration of a commemorative breast cancer stamp, issued by the U.S. Postal Service. "I certainly didn't think I'd be doing anything like this," Peterson reflects. "But Lasell gave me a feeling of purpose and self-esteem. Those professors were always there for me, at night and even on week-ends. I guess I just translated that sense of commitment to my own life."

And until Nancy Peterson finds herself jobless, her mission remains the same: raising dollars and awareness for a breast cancer cure. "This isn't just a woman's disease," she explains. "It's a family disease—we are mothers, daughters, sisters, wives and, this year alone, 46,000 of us will die of breast cancer. We don't have any time to waste." VAN WINKLE HALL from Lasell in 1996, at the same time that Mrs. Van Winkle was awarded an honorary bachelor of science in business.

Melissa Kovack '98, who spoke on behalf of the 70 students who live in Van Winkle Hall, declared Mrs. Van Winkle an honorary life resident and expressed their appreciation of the transformation of the building — with its new name, welcoming entryway, beautiful patio, planters, and cafe tables with umbrellas.

As her husband, Arthur, watched from the sidelines, beaming with pride, Adelaide Van Winkle spoke from the podium. "I'm happy to have this residence hall named after me. After all, my husband's father has a building at New Jersey's Centenary College named for him; my husband has a dorm at Babson named for him; and now I can say that I have a Van Winkle Hall too."

She added, "It has been a privilege to work with President de Witt, who, along with the dedicated faculty and board members, keeps the College current and competitive."

At the close of the ceremony, she was serenaded by the Four MUSEketeers, a barbershop quartet, who offered an updated version of "Sweet Adeline" with the name, appropriately, changed to Adelaide. Then everyone recessed to take part in a Lasell tradition that dates back to the days when Adelaide Shaffer was a student, River Day — a canoe race and luncheon on the banks of the Charles. This time, for the first time in the history of Lasell, a canoe filled with a team from Van Winkle Hall was among the enthusiastic lineup of competitors. 🐾 the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and U.S. Small Business Administration, she has become the epitome of the personally and professionally competent woman Lasell strives to create through its connected learning curriculum.

Zinkowski feels that what she has learned by example at Lasell has influenced her business style. "I incorporated Lasell's commitment to volunteerism — something you see across the College's entire curriculum — into my own business," she says. "The concept of giving back should be the mainstay of our society, especially in the corporate world. I thoroughly believe this philosophically and I want my employees to do so as well."

Patty Zinkowski is eager to tackle her new responsibilities and challenges. What is her management philosophy? "I don't micromanage," she maintains. "I try not to lose sight of the big picture." Zinkowski praises her fellow board members, their dedication to Lasell, and their proven ability to work together. "We respect each other and care very much for the welfare of the institution," she concludes.

She is particularly energized by Lasell's investment in its own future. "The pace of change is impressive," she says, "and the school has adapted well with a solid infrastructure, state-of-the-art technology, and a brand new athletic center. At the same time, the tradition of women helping women is at the very core of Lasell's identity and, indeed, its heritage." 🐾

Message from the Annual Fund Chair

By Elisse Allinson Share '65

LASELL'S ANNUAL FUND IS primed to demonstrate yet again the pride and support of its alumnae for the College's many exciting programs, resources, and activities.

As you know, money raised by the Annual Fund directly benefits students by supporting academics, library resources, student financial aid, athletics, student services, and building and grounds maintenance. Alumnae and parent participation levels also influence the support an institution like Lasell can obtain from corporations and foundations, since grants are frequently contingent upon the levels of giving from institutional constituencies.

As we begin Lasell's first comprehensive, university-style, multimillion-dollar campaign to undergird the new strategic plan and celebrate the upcoming sesquicentennial in 2001, the need to generate Annual Fund dollars has never been greater. This year's goal is $440,000. Currently, we are slightly over the halfway mark. But we have the opportunity to meet and even surpass our goal and make 1997 the fifth consecutive record-breaking year!

If you have not already done so, please consider supporting Lasell this year. Your gift has an enormous impact on so many essential aspects of the College. Remember that participation is important, regardless of the size of the gift. With women's education at the core of Lasell's mission for the past 146 years, you will be participating in the greatest gift of all — an education that will last a lifetime!

In the next few weeks, you may be hearing from one of our students asking for your commitment. We hope you will respond generously. Thank you. ♡ approach, Dr. Panchuck maintains. "Through MI, we look at the many different ways that children demonstrate intelligence, beyond the traditional showcase skills of reading, writing, and arithmetic. There are a number of ways of being capable. A mechanic or plumber can be as skillful in his or her way as a doctor, despite the fact that one may not learn in the same way." It is likely that special needs education will emerge as its own field of study at Lasell. "We are actively exploring the addition of a special needs certification," Dr. Panchuck says.

"We have exciting opportunities at Lasell to seriously involve our students in special needs environments. We are encouraged by the fact that we have added a third laboratory site on campus, Clarke East (see story on page 5). Interaction with Clarke — where one of our students, Jennifer Sweeney '98, is already installed as a student-teacher intern — and Camp Colors, the summer requirement at Clarke East, which currently enrolls three students who are profoundly deaf.

"This is an inspiring place to be," says Sweeney, who has worked in a day care setting for two years and is certified to work with preschoolers, infants, and toddlers. "I asked for a special needs setting and was fortunate to fill this slot at Clarke East, where children learn to communicate orally despite their handicap." Sweeney says it is challenging and rewarding to look at a child through his or her abilities, not liabilities.

"This exciting new alliance for Lasell offers significant benefits for the faculty and staff of the Clarke School and Lasell. But even more important, the affiliation will enrich learning for our undergraduates at the same time that it provides whole new dimensions of learning possibilities for youngsters who are deaf or hearing impaired," says President de Witt.

Clarke's mission is to instill hearing-impaired children with a belief in their own capabilities and to provide them with the skills they need to participate freely, fully, and independently in the hearing and speaking world.

Clarke East at Lasell College has taken up residence in Pickard House, on the campus. The school already has 10 students enrolled in its preschool and parent/infant programs and welcomes inquiries. All services are modeled after the school's successful early intervention, mainstream, and preschool programs.

"We were seeking a college program with a strong reputation for training professionals in early childhood education with which to affiliate, and Lasell offers just that," said Clarke President Dennis Gjerdingen. "It is a good match for both institutions." ♡

Clarke provides comprehensive preschool and early intervention services, rehabilitative services for children with cochlear implants, and support to mainstream placements for young children.

Yamawaki Art and Cultural Center

FULL SCHEDULE OF ART AND EVENTS PROVIDES BRIDGE TO CULTURAL DIVERSITY

IT HAS BEEN THREE YEARS SINCE LASELL'S ELEGANTLY REFURBISHED Carter Hall was dedicated as the Yamawaki Art and Cultural Center. Today, with a full schedule of art exhibitions, lectures, and performing arts (see calendar, page 12) — all of which are open to the public — the Center is living up to its mandate to attract and display a diversity of art and cultural offerings to benefit Lasell and its surrounding community.

"Yamawaki serves as a platform for multicultural art, music, theater, and education, not only for Lasell students, faculty, and staff, but also for the community around us," affirms Gallery director, André van de Putte. "The Center opens its doors to talent, regardless of age, ethnic background, or gender." Art exhibits have featured the works of students, alumnae, and the urban expressions of children from the Mother Caroline Academy in Dorchester, as well as offerings from community artists.

Educational lectures by visiting artists run from February to May. Authorities on issues ranging from paper sculpture to aging have also been part of the Center's programming. And regular classical music concerts by the All-Newton Music School are now a welcome staple, shining a light on some of the region's most talented musicians, who perform free for the community.

Recently, a seven-year-old Korean violin prodigy held a formal recital at Yamawaki, leaving her audience in awe of her talent. "We invited students from the nearby Williams School to attend the dress rehearsal," van de Putte recalled. "The auditorium was filled with children four- to eight-years-old, and they were mesmerized."

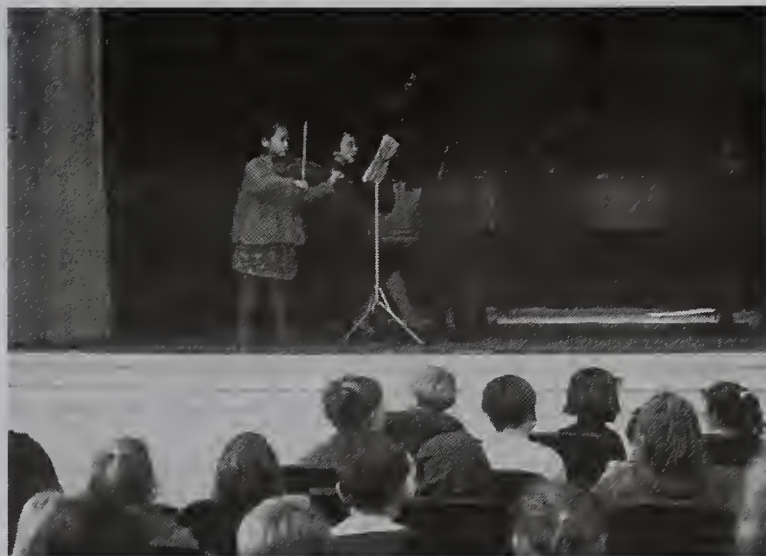

Additionally, in the spirit of connected learning, the Center provides students with powerful learning experiences that transcend the classroom. "Students have the opportunity to meet with and ask questions of artists at every juncture of their involvement here, whether it be pre- or post-performance or exhibit," says van de Putte, who also directs the Art and Interior Design programs at Lasell. "I see the Center as an extraordinary teaching tool. Students become involved in the day-to-day running of the gallery; they get hands-on experience in all aspects, from generating publicity to planning openings and overseeing artist receptions. It also includes the basics of curatorial practice, determining how best to use gallery space to give the work its optimum platform. We try to bring students in as much as possible."

Exhibits change monthly, with seven or eight artists featured in the light-filled gallery space each calendar year. "When we first opened the Center to artists, scheduling was a little hit-or-miss. But this year, with the establishment of a juried selection process — along with a carefully fixed show schedule — we have been able to use the Center as a serious showcase for a wide range of work from talented, emerging artists. Clearly, there is an Asian influence here. But we aim for total domestic and international diversity."

The Yamawaki art jury is composed of faculty, staff, students, alumnae, and community members who come together to review applications that include a statement of purpose, a resume, and slides of the work submitted by artists interested in exhibiting at Yamawaki.

"Criteria include quality of work, the message within the work, and an appropriateness to education that serves students and the community," van de Putte explains. "This year we received 20 applications and we filled seven slots, with two or three alternate selections to fill in if a time conflict occurred."

ANDRÉ VAN DE PUTTE

"Yamawaki serves as a platform for multicultural art, music, theater, and education, not only for Lasell students, faculty, and staff, but also for the community around us," affirms Gallery director, André van de Putte.

YAMAWAKI ART AND CULTURAL CENTER GUIDELINES FOR ARTIST SELECTION

THE MISSION OF THE YAMAWAKI GALLERY IS TO present creative works by artists from a wide range of cultural backgrounds. Where possible, new emerging artists are given an opportunity to exhibit. A jury of faculty, staff, students, alumnae, and community members come together to review artists' applications and measure submissions according to specific guidelines.

All complete applications must include no more than 20 slides of original work, a current resumé, and an artist's statement. The artist's cultural background, diversity, and the artist's ability to offer an educational experience for Lasell students (lecture/workshop, etc.) are also considered.

Quality of the work, originality, content or message of the work, the ability to support the Gallery's goals and mission, and consistency of the artist's statement to the work are also taken into account.

In some cases, applications are submitted for two or more artists. In these cases, the merits of each artist are considered separately using the above criteria as well as the following: Is there a recognizable and defined theme? Is all of the work compatible from an aesthetic standpoint (quality, content, etc.)? Is there an appropriateness of the group's affiliation, and is there a demonstrated interest in working on a collaborative project?

For more information, please call André van de Putte at (617) 243-2295.

IT WON'T BE THE SAME WITHOUT U!

Does Your Class Year End in a "2" or "7"?

IT WON'T BE THE SAME WITHOUT you unless you plan to return to Lasell for Reunion Weekend, May 30-June 1, 1997. Chairperson Sandra Davidow '82 invites all alumnae to return to campus to participate in Reunion and remember when Lasell was the center of your universe. Among the activities are:

Lasell Night at the Pops
Blue Man Group
(a popular play at the theater)
Tours of campus
Class Parade and pictures
Reunion luncheon
Alumnae College Internet Workshop
President's Reception
President's Dinner
Karaoke/Nostalgia Night at the Pub

ALUMNAE CLUB GATHERINGS

Throughout the year, President Thomas E. J. de Witt and members of the Alumnae Affairs staff travel around the country for Lasell gatherings to meet with alumnae of all ages. These Alumnae Club gatherings provide an opportunity to meet and network with the other alums in your areas while also hearing the latest information about Lasell. Recently, many spouses/guests have attended these events and have enjoyed hearing about their partner's college life. Friendships are renewed and also begun. Please contact the Alumnae Office at (617) 243-2141 if you can help to provide ideas, organize an event, etc. The office creates and mails all invitations, so the hostess needs only to receive the RSVPs and make some follow-up phone calls.
